Randi is a boy and the eldest son in his family. He has anemia and is short for his age due to a poor diet. He lives with his parents on the top of a hill in a small house of made of wood and cardboard. The house does not have electricity, water or sewage. The mother is in her early 20s and does not work to take care of the children. She had serious difficulties during her pregnancies due to high levels of anemia requiring a blood transfusion. The father works in construction but is unable to work every day because he is asked to work on an as needed basis. The family is concerned about how to support both children with tuition to go to school since Randi's younger sibling has also reached school age.
